EXHIBITOR EDITION

Thank you, Daphne —

We at CATS are pleased to accept your invitation to work together with you at CAT WORLD™, and are thrilled to face the challenge of offering in our combined CAT WORLD™ and EXHIBITOR editions a new and broader concept of complete service to the world-wide cat fancy.

The first issue of our joint contribution to cat breeders and exhibitors will be included in the February 1984 CATS. It will go to all the readers of each of our publications and will include the full CAT WORLD™, CATS MAGAZINE, and CATS EXHIBITOR EDITION.

Subscriptions of present subscribers to both publications will be combined and extended, and other adjustments will be made to assure that all of your readers and ours receive full value.

We look forward with you to being able to accomplish even more fully the dedication of both of our organizations to the common good of the wide universe of cat people.

Raymond D. Smith

Yes, dear Breeder/Exhibitor and Reader, starting with the January/February, 1984 issue, CAT WORLD™ INTERNATIONAL MAGAZINE will be known as Daphne Negus' CAT WORLD™ and will be coming to you monthly within the pages of CATS Magazine EXHIBITOR EDITION, so you will receive three publications in one — CATS Magazine, the EXHIBITOR EDITION and CAT WORLD™.

THEORIES

by Thea de Vos

HAIR ANALYSIS

Volumes have been written about the value of hair analysis for detecting vitamin and mineral deficiencies in the body. This analysis is particularly popular with health food oriented people and is often recommended by health food stores for both humans and pets. Other health professionals, especially the more conservative element, call it quackery. For those who have never heard of hair analysis, this, then, is a brief description:

Small cuttings of hair are taken from, in humans, the nape of the neck. The hair is mechanically washed and then the levels of vitamins, trace elements and potential toxic heavy metals in the hair are interpreted. These levels are compared with tables of "normal" ranges for the species under consideration. Recommendations are then made for supplemental therapy and, usually, chelated supplements are recommended for easier digestion.

Believing that this could be an easy and exciting way of researching whether fungus is nutrient-related, I called several laboratories. It appears that very little work has been done on cats since they had no basic information to which they could compare their findings. Horses and dogs appear to be the more popular species for which analysis has been done, and most of the correlated information that was available was for zinc and copper. None of the laboratories I consulted was prepared to undertake cat hair analysis.

Subsequently I found that quite a bit of skepticism surrounds hair analysis. Most interesting was a paper which claimed that the analysis for patches of white hair on a bicolored dog differed from the patches of black hair on the same dog. One of the major problems in the interpretation of hair analysis is the dearth of information on how well concentrations of various elements correlate with their levels in the tissues and body fluids. Dr. K. Michael Hambridge, a pediatrician at the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center, in Denver, says, "We have extraordinarily little information on this and information is of basic and fundamental importance before we can really start to interpret hair data." (Research Resources Reporter, October, 1983, p.5.)

Minerals from the environment also contaminate the hair and pose another problem. According to Dr.

Hambridge, the hair absorbs exogenous trace elements and it would be difficult to know whether all of it came from the body and grew out with the hair or whether we are simply reading material which came directly from the environment and stuck to the hair. Shampoos are another problem: many of them contain zinc and selenium. Bleaching, dyeing the hair, etc., also obscure the data.

The analysis also differs according to which hair is used. The further from the scalp, the larger the concentration of mineral. Hair growth rate and existing deficiencies must also be taken into consideration. For instance, during a severe zinc deficiency, hair growth is slowed but the zinc deficiency may be normal. During mild zinc deficiencies the growth rate appears to be unaffected and hair zinc concentrations decrease markedly. Similar results may be expected in patients with protein-malnutrition. Sex, age and season of the year all add to the variations.

I wonder if, after reading the above, you feel as let down as I do. All of us hope for miracle cures. Would it not have been wonderful if we could have just snipped a few hairs, sent them off to be analyzed and then - presto! - corrected health problems instantly by correcting the diet? Perhaps it is as well, for there are few amongst us expert in our knowledge of nutrients. We could cause more harm by adding vitamins and minerals and further unbalancing the body.

SOME TIPS —

If it is bacteria or a virus it can be transferred from your cat to a bar of soap via your hands. On the bar of soap it will grow and live up to 48 hours. While a recent report on this subject may be viewed as trite, remember, if you have sick cats in isolation you could prevent the spread of disease by using liquid soap instead. Why risk the spread of upper respiratory disease via a bar of soap when you have worked so hard to isolate sick animals? It could be useful to fill a spare liquid soap container with a disinfectant (that is safe for cats) instead of soap. These disinfectants don't kill all cat germs/viruses, but even a little prevention is better than no prevention. When isolating animals, remember viruses move through air vents as well. These should be covered with a suitable filter material, but consult an electrician in case these are a fire hazard in your particular air system.

* From Joan Wasthuber comes this tip. — If you suspect that a kitten has an umbilical abscess, wring a towel out in hot water (not hot enough to burn the delicate skin of a newborn kitten). Press the wrung-out towel against the navel several times. If an abscess is present, the pus should surface.

International Cattery Tour

Jedi Cattery CFA, CFF
BRITISH SHORTHAIRES & SCOTTISH FOLDS

by Jean Thawley

The name JEDI came from Jean and Diane. We shared our cattery name at first. Now, Diane, whose married name is Crowe, has her own cattery, CROCAT. The space movie about Jedi is not connected; I think we came first. . . .

Our subdivision home is a three bedroom brick ranch. We have a large corner lot, but most of it is frontage. John (my husband) built the garage oversize with a picture window ready for part of it to be a family room. With two children in their early teens, the time came when we needed this room. Had the cats come first it may have been part of the cattery. Since our children have been replaced by grandchildren who spend a great deal of time with us, we have not considered making it part of the cattery. I won't say it hasn't crossed my mind, however. The same handyman talent that built the garage and family room was put to use again by John when I decided to breed cats.

It will probably sound familiar to most cat breeders when I say, "I only intended to have three or four females that I would breed to outside studs." This being the plan, John attached another room to the family room, using space inside the garage. It couldn't be very large due to the clearance space for garage door and the large aisle leading into the laundry room. This is now my work and storage room. The five female kittens I started with were comfortable and snug in a compact little room that was insulated, heated, and with a window that looked out into the garage. This was in October and the kittens spent periods running the house for exercise so everything seemed fine. There were nine cages so I couldn't imagine ever being short of space. When the time came for breeding I was only going to keep a select one or two females. Spring came and I realized I couldn't bear for the cats not to be able to see outside, so I bought a large dog run for the backyard. Most of our backyard is filled by a large above ground pool and the dog (cat) run sat in the middle of what was left. Since this was an eyesore, John decided to build an outside cattery. He went right across the back of the garage, except for the back entrance. The four walk-in cages opened straight onto the garden. We soon found that this was a mistake. Not only was the weather a handicap to me, it was not always funny chasing cats around the garden whenever I opened the doors. We went through a few alterations before we finally got to what I am showing you now. . . There are four runs, two of them are 6' x 6' x 8' and two are 6' x 4' x 8'. We went the other side of the garage service door with two tiers of stud cages and enclosed the whole thing with a 3'-wide walkway. Now I only have to catch escaped cats in a confined area. They really enjoy the game. In each run there is a top story cage that is 6' x 2'. These can be closed to make separate housing if for any reason I need a cat confined. It is also good for introducing the young ones to the outside. Each run has a full length wooden box with a lid that opens for cleaning, and a small arch entrance for the cats. These not only serve as houses but as a bench to put food dishes on. This discourages ants and other crawling insects.

I have only had trouble with fleas once or twice and they were brought in on visiting queens or cats that I had sent out. I use flea products in the cattery for all bugs and insects since they are cat safe. I always spot check so I have no surprises. The outside of the cattery is screened; although it doesn't keep all the flies out, it keeps the problem to a minimum.

The cats stay outside well into winter and only come in at night when it gets very cold. I cover the outside screening with clear plastic for the winter. This keeps out the wind and snow — and works well for me, too, since I spend a great deal of time out there. The roof is white fiberglass panels. Michigan summers range from 80° to 95° but there seems to be enough shade and breeze that everyone remains relatively cool.

The inside cattery is always cool as it has no outside

I used 'Four in One Epoxy enamel', non-toxic when dry. It dries in 4-6 hours, but I would give it at least a week. There are no floor coverings so cleaning is very easy and efficient.

Inside cages & work/storage room. Door to outside cattery & end door into laundry room.

walls so if any cat looks uncomfortable I can always bring them in. We made the three end cages inside extra long for the mothers and their kittens by going across the end of the room but I prefer to raise the litters in the house. Our two spare bedrooms are not used much by anyone other than the grandchildren and they don't mind sharing with mamas and kittens. I find it more comfortable, too, as I often spend the night with a mama due to have her kittens. I have two cages in each room.

I guess there will always be room for improvement but, for the limited space in a subdivision home, and coping with the Michigan seasons, we have got things pretty much in order.

I feed an equal mixture of raw meat and Hills P.D.. this is formulated for nursing mamas and kittens and obtained through your vet or good drugstore. To this I add different flavors of canned food for variety. The raw meat I use comes in different mixtures, all beef or all beef plus vitamins and minerals, chicken, and Surf & Turf. I add bone meal and vitamin D. (Please note, get professional advice before messing with vitamin D.) Other oils or vitamins I give as individual needs arise.

In the inside cattery I have six cages that are 33" x 33" and the three large end cages that are 5'6" x 33", along with a work and storage area that leads into the laundry room. It would be nice to have a bigger inside cattery but it is comfortable and the cats spend very little time in there. It is more a winter bedroom. The heater is an electric, radiant heat, baseboard type, very inexpensive to run, and plugs in a regular wall outlet so there is no installation. The British Shorthair and Scottish Folds are both very hardy breeds so I don't heat above 45/50°, although, as well insulated as we are, I could get the temperature much higher.

There is a large quarantine cage and a germicidal light in my work area. It is opposite the window looking out at the outside cattery so any cat that has been confined is not totally alone or bored. I have a deep freeze for the raw meat and cabinets to store canned food and supplies. There is also enough space for my cat carriers and extra litter trays.

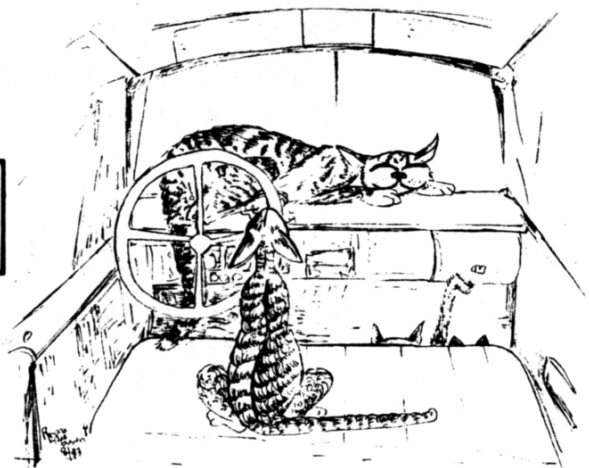

After filling all the cracks and crevices, I painted the inside cages with three or four coats of epoxy paint.

There's a phenomenon experienced by many people in this fast-moving age called mid-life career crisis. It's that time when, suddenly, the work you've been doing for the past several years doesn't seem near as enchanting any more. You wish you could quit your dreary job, pack up your ambitions, and strike out in an entirely new direction.

Most of us do nothing but dream of change. A few of us, though, find ourselves in the enviable position of being able to do something about our dream. I was one of the lucky ones (or crazy ones, depending on how you look at it). I gave notice at work, sold my house in California, and headed off to Santa Fe, New Mexico to build my house and find my fortune. Not like normal people, though. My moving plans had to include twenty-four household pets, Cornish Rexes, Abyssinians (one of which was very pregnant), eight rabbits, a dog, several orchids and bonsai plants, and a cactus garden.

Moving a household is trying enough. Moving animals can be downright frustrating; especially when you can't afford to ship the whole bunch, and your car doesn't have air conditioning. But there are ways to make the ordeal more tolerable for all parties.

We moved the cats and the dog in a small station wagon and a small pickup with a camper atop. (The rabbits, which won't eat while traveling, had to be shipped by air). The pickup camper was a particular blessing; you couldn't hear the cats complaining of their fate, so could concentrate on driving, unaware of petty squabbles. The pickup bed was quite literally filled with crates — one large dog crate in which five cats shared quarters, and ten carriers of medium or large size. All the carriers were arranged so that, by moving only two out of the way, one could gain access to all the other crates without removing them from the truck. We parceled out cats among the crates according to size, depth of coat, and who was speaking to whom that day. During the four-day journey from Monterey down through Bakersfield, California, across the Mojave Desert and along Interstate 40 all the way to Albuquerque, we occasionally switched cats back and forth in the pickup truck camper. The pregnant Abyssinian rode by herself in a large crate in the station wagon.

Each crate had a litter pan and a disposable diaper used as a lining. Water and food were not left in the crates while the truck was moving. Instead, we offered water (bottled water from home) to all the cats twice or three times a day at rest stops. We also let some of the cats loose in the back of the truck, varying who got let out so that everyone got a chance to look out the windows, stretch their legs, and hiss at the other cats through the bars of the crates as they clambered around. The screened windows of the camper were left slightly open to let a cooling breeze circulate.

Speaking of cooling breezes, temperatures were fortunately tolerable during the trip. The nights were cool and the days — although they got into the high eighties

JEDI Cattery Tour — from p.19

Outside takes a general litter tray cleaning and sweeping daily and a good hose down with liquid bleach when needed. All bedding is machine washable and what carpet I use is indoor/outdoor, so it can be hosed down and disinfected. I find owing a wet/dry vacuum is the answer to any other cleaning problems outside. A Dust Buster, Handi-vac is just great for indoor kitten cages with constant cleaning up.

I doubt if the Perfect Cattery exists, but I am very proud and happy with mine, and my cats seem content and healthy. . . .possibly a little spoilt.

or low nineties — were no real problem. If the temperature had been higher, we would have probably resorted to placing pans of ice in front of the carriers, draping the crates in wet towels to provide for evaporative cooling, and making sure there was always good air circulation over the crates. I also use a small cigarette-lighter-operated fan, mounted in the back of my car, to get the air moving.

We stayed in motels every night. We always arranged to have the pickup camper and station wagon as close to the room as possible, because it was necessary to leave some of the cats in the cars overnight. A few, however, were selected to sleep in the room with us. We varied these choices every night. The only cats who never got to sleep in the motel were the studs and the pregnant cat.

However, each stud spent at least one night loose in the camper, and the pregnant one had the privacy of the station wagon in which to contemplate the imminence of kittens, undisturbed.

Feeding was done twice a day — in the morning as soon as we woke up, and in the evening as soon as we got to a motel. We fed dry food in the morning and canned food at night — no fancy stuff when traveling! We also fed lightly; the cats were not able to exercise much during the trip and it helped to cut down on the other problem — waste. Litter boxes were changed completely every morning and scooped at every stop, and the disposable diapers lining the crates were changed whenever necessary.

Though traveling with so many cats was a rather complex task, the system — once worked out — operated very well. We felt we could have traveled for several more days, if necessary, without endangering the health or sanity of either the cats or ourselves. In fact, I later used a modification of the system to move three cats in much cruder conditions in the back of an open pickup. There, I constructed a large box into which I set the carriers, and covered the whole affair with a tarpaulin. The breeze was able to get in under the tarp and up over the open top of the box without creating a draft on the cats. Fortunately, all three cats involved were able to come in the motel at night. I would have drawn lines at leaving cats in an unlockable pickup bed at night.

Having gone through that big move, I would make a few recommendations to anyone else who is courageous — or desperate — enough to make a similar move:

—Give the cats room enough to move. This may involve trading crates occasionally for a change of viewpoint, or letting a few wander loose in the vehicle.

—Try to carry the cats so they won't be crawling under the brake pedal when loose or driving you up the wall with unnecessary commentary. This may involve a camper or a station wagon with a dog barrier in the back.

—Make cleanups easy. Use disposable crate linings and small litter pans which you can change easily every day. Don't leave food or water in the crates when moving. Arrange multiple crates so that you can reach into them easily without taking them out of the vehicle.

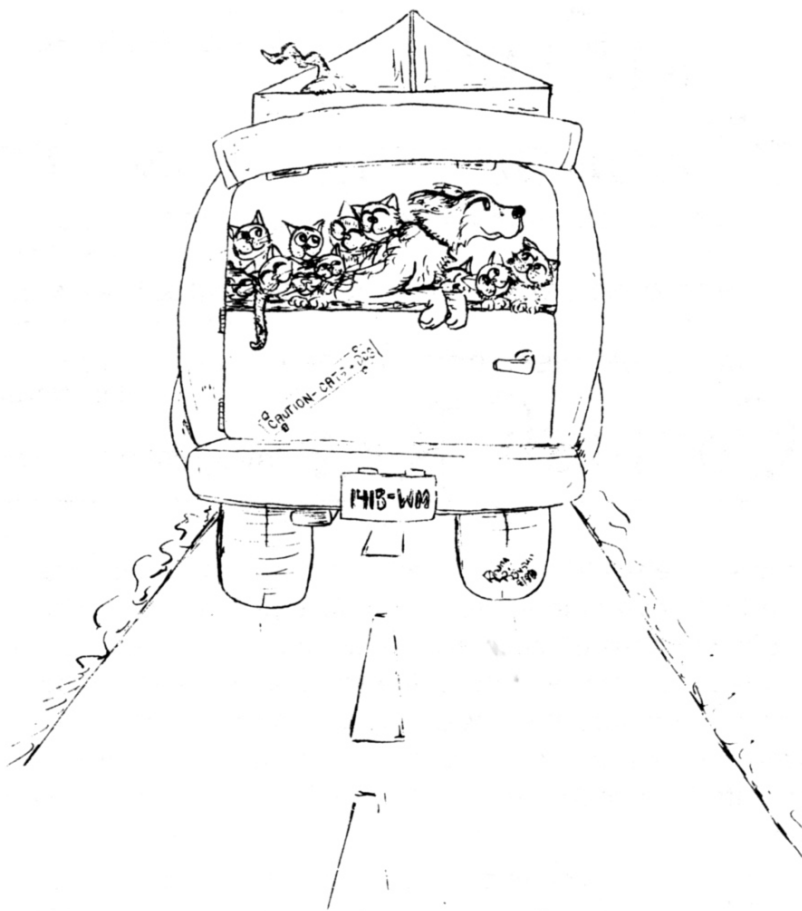

—Feed and water lightly, using commercial cat food. If your cats aren't used to canned or packaged foods, acclimate them a week or two in advance to avoid gastric upsets at a most inconvenient time. If your cats aren't constant show travelers, bring along sufficient bottled water from home to last them the entire trip.

—Feed early enough in the morning so that your little friends decide they have to use the potty before you start out — not just after. Then clean the litter pans as your last task before driving off into the dawn.

—Make sure the crates and their occupants don't get too hot. Provide adequate ventilation, and make doubly sure you park in shady areas when you stop for meals. Here is where a battery-operated fan mounted in the car is a real help. Leave all the car windows open, also — despite fears of car theft — you'll just have to keep an eye on it. Make your stops short — even a shaded car can get dangerously hot on a summer day. Fast food places can be a blessing during the heat of the day. You don't have to leave your car for more than a few minutes, and you can plan on having a relaxing sit-down dinner after the temperatures and the sun have gone down. If it's really hot and you are the kind of person who can drive comfortably at night, you might consider switching your wake/sleep cycle to drive only during the cooler night hours. However, this presents a problem with motels, and the cats would all have to be inside an air-conditioned building while you sleep during the day.

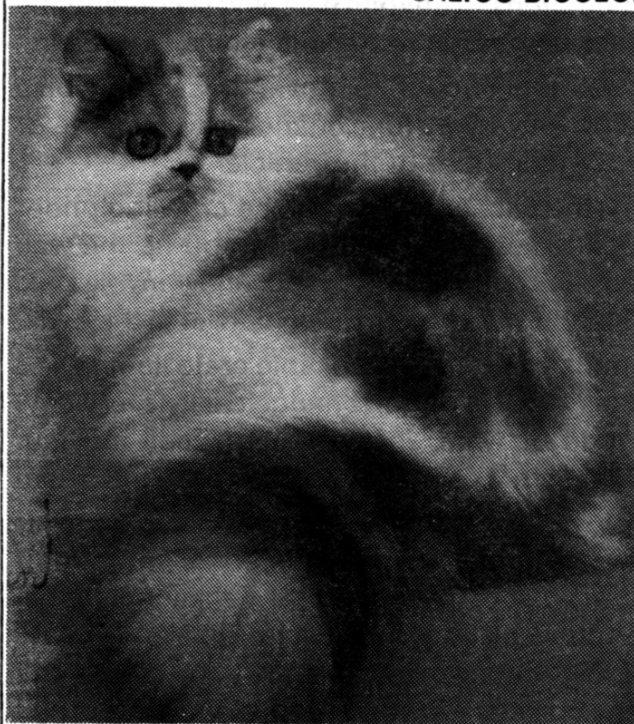

—Above all, give your cats extra attention and affection at every stop, and at night. Give all of them the opportunity to be singled out as your very most favorite cat in the world for at least a few minutes as often as possible. If you think this move is confusing for you, look at it from their benighted viewpoint for a while.

WHAT IS A CYMRIC

by Leslie Falteisek

The Cymric is a purebred moderately longhaired tail-less cat. Born originally of purebred Manx parentage only, and in no way to be considered a hybrid breed (i.e. Manx to Persian, or any other longhaired cat breed), the Cymric is distinguished by two important features — the taillessness of its parent breed, and its medium-length silky double coat.

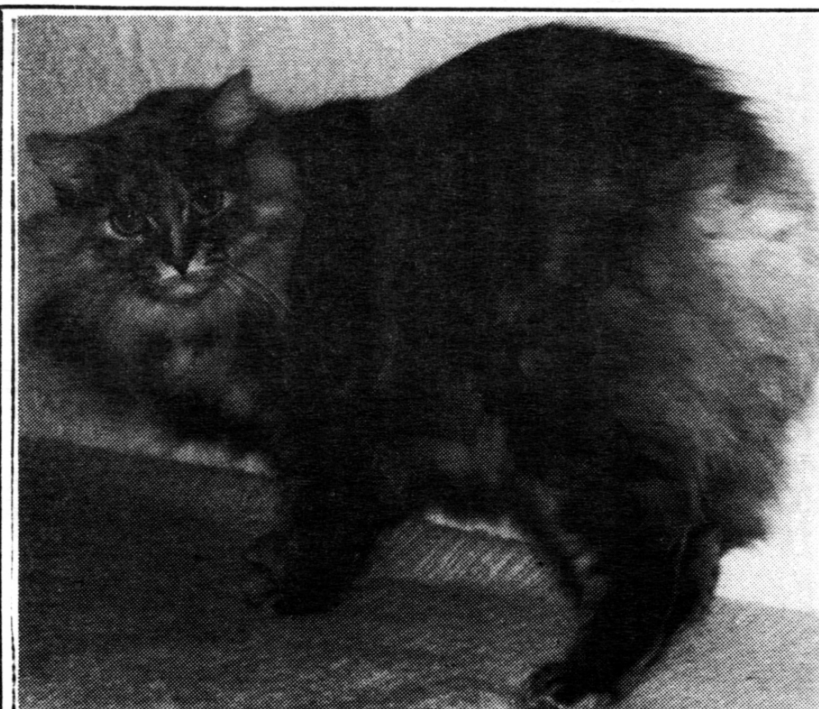

The name Cymric, to the best of my knowledge, means Welsh or of Wales, (pronounced in Welsh as Cum-ric). I first heard the name used by Blair Wright, HELLE Manx, in Canada around 1975 when we were corresponding due to the great interest in the purebred Longhaired Manx (Cymric) in Canada. He told me it came to him through his Welsh grandmother who used to have some longhaired Manx around the household — Cymric is the name she ascribed to them. Blair always pronounced the word Kim-rick and that seems to be the popular pronunciation now.

The tailless factor originated as a dominant mutation in the British Shorthair cat isolated on the Isle of Man, off the west coast of the United Kingdom. Through the principle of dominance, a tailless breed (the Manx) flourished, crossing to the other cats on the Isle which introduced a number of different genes including the recessive longhair coat gene. When selective breeding of Manx began narrowing the gene pool, the recessive coat length gene came to the fore — the longhaired Manx.

The medium length coat is a result of the gene for longhair coat combining with polygenes modifying the length of the down and awn hairs. It is reported that there are longhair Manx on the Isle of Man though I did not see any during my trip to the Government Cattery in Douglas during the summer of 1979. Through selective breeding we are stabilizing the moderate coat length to around a 2" - 2½" on the body. The recessive longhair gene must be present in both shorthair Manx parents to produce the Cymric offspring; and when Cymric are bred to one another, they will produce only longhaired kittens.

EARLY REFERENCES

One of the first references in print to the Longhaired Manx & Cymric was an article written in 1966 by Judith Shaw, KELSHA Manx. Following that were several small selections — one in Cat Fancy Jan/Feb. 1973 issue, titled "Longhaired Cats", by Tana White. She wrote of a purebred cat derived from the registered Manx which, except for coat length, conformed to the Manx Standard approved by the cat fancy. The modified coat was to be "...about two inches or so — but it does not approach Persian length. . . The disposition also is the same, and anyone who has lost their heart to the sensitive and beguiling Manx will find this cat to have exactly the same gentle and loving ways. . ." With the article was a quarter page photo of a white Cymric. The photo was not identified, so in 1975 I wrote to the author in care of Cat

Fancy Magazine. Sometime later I received a very nice letter from Ms. White along with a pedigree. He was Lovebunny's Precocious Dream, a copper-eyed white male bred and owned by Althea A. Frahm, LOVEBUNNY Manx, Pasadena, CA. He was born December 1963, was registered in the American Cat Association (ACA) and was being shown with his shorthair Manx brothers competing for Best of Breed awards. Unfortunately, the original photo could not be secured and the xerox copy that I had of the article had been scribbled on leaving the photo quite unpublishable. It should suffice to say that he was an excellent example of our present day Cymric — high in hindquarters, round head, small wide-set ears, broad muzzle, heavy balanced leg bone and extremely plush full coat. There is little evidence, however, that he was used outside Ms. Frahm's own breeding program, or registered with any other association. Althea Frahm appeared to be a pioneer in the development of the Longhair Manx, but her efforts did not seem to reach beyond the American Cat Association.

The next reference to the LH Manx was in an article by Don Shaw, in the May 1974 Cats Magazine article, "Genetics Time". His article was paraphrased by Ms. Shaw in the July 1974 issue (Vol.1 No.1) of The Manx Cat magazine. It discussed the three cat hair types — Down, Awn, Guard — and the role of each in characterizing the moderately longhaired cat. Reference was also made to the Somali and Balinese breeds which were then working toward CFA championship recognition. (Both are now recognized breeds.)

From 1974 on there have been many small articles published regarding the LH Manx or Cymric, primarily in The Manx Cat and newsletters such as the CMCS Quarterly (no longer being published) and, recently, Cymric Chat.

With interest in the Longhair Manx climbing, energy was spent in correspondence and organization of support for the Cymric in both Canada and the United States. By 1975 many of the smaller cat associations had allowed Manx registration and some were allowing them to be shown though they were always, at that time, competing with their Manx brothers for Best of Breed. Many of the new people who became involved with the Cymric in the early 1970's felt that there were significant differences (aesthetic as well as physical) between Manx and Cymrics sufficient to warrant seeking separate breed status for the LH Manx (Cymric). In early 1976, the International United Cymric association (unaffiliated) was organized and, though the membership was small (25), the efforts were great, and the word spread. In May 1976, through the extensive efforts of Blair Wright in Canada, the Cymric was recognized for championship status in the Canadian Cat Association (CCA).

In January 1977, through a united effort of concerned Manx and Cymric breeders, CFA changed the breed classification of the LH Manx to limit parentage to only registered shorthair Manx and Longhair Manx out of registered shorthair Manx. That was the first progressive step for the Cymric in CFA as, prior to that time, the registry had been open to Manx/Persian hybrids. Any cats which had been registered as hybrids have never been seen in the current purebred Cymric pedigrees and would not be used in accordance with current registration rules and the breeders code of ethics. So many Manx lines were found to carry the recessive longhair gene that hybridization was unnecessary and, in fact, undesirable as it would change the moderate coat length and certainly the Manx type.

EARLY LONGHAIRD MANX

As previously mentioned, some of the earliest Cymrics in the public eye were shown and bred by Althea Frahm. In CFA, the records are slightly more obscure. Prior to 1976, most longhaired Manx born of CFA Manx parents were sold as pets or, if of outstanding type, were registered as shorthair Manx. From pedigree research over the last eight years, it is obvious that there were longhaired Manx used in earlier CFA Manx breeding programs. A couple that come to mind are Couer de Lion's Samantha Noire, a black rumpy-riser female, born April '68 out of GRC Brian MacGlyndwr, Royal Tanist and GRC Kittrik's Elfin of Couer de Lion; and Kellogg Archangel of Kelsha, a blue-eyed white rumpy out of GRC Glendower's Bruce and CH Kelsha Polly of Kellogg. There certainly were other longhair Manx along the way in the shorthair pedigrees (generally not listed as such, of course), but current knowledge of them is limited. Unlike the Somali breed, there does not seem to be one, or even two, major purebred longhair Manx responsible for the Cymric breed. Some pedigrees also mention Venda's Lorri, odd-eyed white tailed female, as being a longhair Manx and also Sunday's Samantha of Venda, black female, but the records are not clear. What seems to be of universal importance is the shorthair Manx which are carrying the recessive longhair gene and passing it along to their offspring. The numbers are rather extensive, but I will list a few of the more dominant Manx: (listed alphabetically, no titles): —

- BLUE GRASS TIGER OF BENTON
- BRIAR-BRAE MAPLE SUGAR OF DAPHNE
- BRIAR-BRAE MARAT OF GENTILBELLE
- BRIAR-BRAE MOHAWK
- BUSHOME MAXIE OF BRIAR-BRAE

- MAPLE MANOR SIR DON
- PLAHN'S DONOVAN'S DUMPLIN'
- RED OAKS MILL MAXIM
- RHETORIC'S SASSBACK
- SINLEO CRYSTAL COTY OF BELMEAD
- TETRO TAIGA OF KELLOGG
- TYNWALD TEQUILA MOCKINGBIRD
- VENDA'S BAM BAM OF MANX MAGIC
- VENDA MANNIX

As I mentioned earlier, most of the offspring of these cats were sold as altered pets and are not around to carry on the longhair tradition. It should be noted, too, that the cats behind these listed, through one or both parents, are also carrying the longhair gene. Doubling up on those cats in your pedigrees increases the possibility of longhair Manx offspring. This seems particularly noticeable when Blue Grass Tiger of Benton appears or in those pedigrees heavy with KELSHA or BRIAR-BRAE. Also, please realize that just because these cats (and there are many more not listed here) have passed along the recessive longhair gene to some offspring, not all their kittens would have to be carrying longhair — the lines must be bred correctly to encourage the recessive genes to combine for a phenotypic Longhair Manx.

CURRENT PRODUCING CYMRICS

Since the awakening, a few really good longhair Manx have come forward in the development of the Cymric breed (referencing primarily CFA registered cats), they are: (no titles): —

- GENERAL: The overall impression of the tailless Cymric cat is that of roundness; round head with firm, round muzzle and prominent cheeks; broad chest; substantial short front legs; short back which arches from shoulders to a round rump; great depth of flank; and rounded, muscular thighs. The heavy, glossy double moderate-length coat is the main differentiating factor of the Cymric from its parent breed — the Manx. The Cymric should be alert, clear of eye, with a glistening, clean, well-groomed coat. They should have a healthy physical appearance, feeling firm and muscular, neither too fat nor too lean. ➔

(Also same pedigree for Plahn's MacDuff of Maxmar, black smoke rumpy male Cymric).

HEAD, EARS, EYES: Round head with prominent cheeks and a jowly appearance. Head is slightly longer than it is broad. Moderately rounded forehead, pronounced cheekbones, and jowliness (more evident in the adult males) enhance the round appearance. Short, thick neck. Definite whisker break, with large round whisker pads. In profile there is a gentle nose dip with no inclination to a nose break. Well-developed muzzle with a strong chin. Large, round, and full eyes, set at a slight angle toward the nose (outer corners slightly higher than inner corners). Ideal eye color conforms to requirements of coat color. EARS wide at the base, tapering gradually to a rounded tip. Ear tufts are desirable. Medium in size in proportion to the head, widely spaced, set slightly outward & downward, giving a cradled appearance to the set from the rear.

BODY: Solidly muscled, compact and well-balanced, medium in size with sturdy bone structure. The Cymric is stout in appearance with broad chest and well-sprung ribs; surprisingly heavy when lifted. The constant repetition of curves and circles gives the Cymric the appearance of great substance and durability, a cat that is powerful without the slightest hint of coarseness. Males may be somewhat larger than females. Flank (fleshy area of the side between ribs and hip) has greater depth than in other breeds, causing considerable depth to the body when viewed from the side. The short back forms a smooth, continuous arch from the shoulders to rump, curving at the rump to form the desirable round look. Shortness of back is unique to the Cymric and parent breed — Manx, but is in proportion to the entire cat. Males may be somewhat longer.

LEGS & FEET: Heavily boned, forelegs short and set well apart to emphasize the broad, deep chest. Hind legs much longer than forelegs with heavy, muscular thighs and substantial lower legs. Longer hind legs cause the rump to be considerably higher than the shoulders. Hind legs are straight when viewed from behind. Paws are neat and round, with five toes in front and four behind.

TAILLESSNESS: Absolute in the perfect specimen, with a decided hollow at the end of the backbone where, in a tailed cat, a tail would begin. A rise of bone at the end of the spine is allowed and should not be penalized unless it is such that it stops the judge's hand, thereby spoiling the tailless appearance of the cat. The rump is extremely broad and round.

COAT: The double coat, as in the Manx, should be of medium length over the main body. Breeches, abdomen, and neck ruff (especially in the mature cat) may be longer than on the main body. Coat length below the elbow on the front legs and the hocks on the back should be shorter than on the body, but full in appearance and of the same silky texture — basically a length between the Manx and Cymric body coats. Breeches should be full and thick to the hocks, giving the appearance from the rear, in the mature Cymric, of gaucho pants with boots. Toe tufts are desirable. Coat length on the face, ahead of the ears and jaw-line, should be in keeping with the lower leg areas. The frontal ruff begins behind the ears running downward along the jaw-line and backward into the body coat.

Coat texture is fine and silky, falling smoothly on the body yet being full and plush due to the double coat. Penalize for a coat that lacks density. A cottony coat is undesirable. Coat should have a healthy, glossy appearance.

COLOR: All colors accepted that are accepted for Manx; also an OCC (Other Cymric Colors) class which incorporates all colors not specifically listed for Manx with the exception of those showing hybridization resulting in colors: chocolate, lavender, ticked tabby, colorpoint colors, or these combinations with white.

EYE COLOR: Appropriate to predominant color of the cat.

TRANSFER TO AOV: Definite, visible tail joint. Short coat.

SEVERELY PENALIZE: If the Judge is unable to make cat stand or walk properly.

DISQUALIFY: Evidence of poor physical condition; incorrect number of toes; evidence of hybridization in color or type.

CURRENT NUMBERS IN CFA

According to recent headcount, there are 265 Cymrics (Longhaired Manx) registered in the Cat Fanciers Association with around 100 litters registered since 1976 by roughly 45 individuals. Some of these people have only registered one litter each which cannot be considered an active Cymric breeder, but 17 of those have bred multiple litters in the last 5 years. Currently in CFA, Cymrics are shown either as AOV Manx or in the Miscellaneous Class, though many breeders feel that until the Longhair Manx is granted separate definition from the Manx breed, they are still to be considered "All Other Varieties" of Manx and should be shown as AOV's.

Interested breeders are in the process of organizing a CFA-affiliated breed club with hopes of fulfilling CFA requirements for a "New Color or Breed" presentation by the end of 1984. There are currently two sources of information, discussion, and photos on the Cymric (three, actually, when you count the breeders), one is The Manx Cat published ten times a year, in which articles and photos appear periodically on the Longhair Manx, and the other is Cymric Chat, a newsletter published quarterly. For information on either, write L. Falteisek, 623½ LaBore Rd., Little Canada, MN 55117.

GREAT CATS OF GREAT BRITAIN

Among the several factors that contributed to our decision to conclude CWI's 'Great Cats of Great Britain Awards' — after much deliberation — is the growing difference in exchange rates between our $ and the British £. Our final display features the many winners whose owners have chosen to put their cats in this issue. Carrying on the tradition begun by the former publishers — Sid and Pauline Thompson — has given us all enormous pleasure, which we relinquish with regret. We thank the owners this last time for exhibiting their winners in our pages. So many of our readers enjoy seeing these beautiful cats from 'across the pond' and making lasting contacts with their breeders. We are proud to have been a part of providing a historical record of so many famous cats over the years.

We join in thanking our Honorary Scorers whose voluntary efforts have made these Annual Awards possible. . . Miss Julia M. May, MRCVS (Shorthairs), and Ms. Ruby McCutcheon (Longhairs). . . and we hope you, too, will express your thanks to them for the unimaginable hours of work that they have put in in your behalf.

The cats are shown under the official rules of the Governing Council of Cat Fancy during the show season that begins in June and closes at the end of May.

Owners were notified and invited to participate in the display of winners. Awards have been kept a secret — not even the owners were told what the "Top Fives" and the Highest Scoring cats won. An 'Award of Excellence' ribbon was sent to each owner of a "Top Five" winner and a 'Roll of Honour' ribbon to Breed & Colour winners. The owners of the Top Fives will receive a further token of these important awards as soon as possible.

We say goodbye to this highly acclaimed annual feature with much sadness and hope we will continue to see the wonderful British cats in our other features in future.

Our heartfelt thanks for your participation!

LONGEVITY of PEDIGREED CATS

by Roy Robinson, F.I.Biol

Early in 1983 an appeal was made through the courtesy of the columns of CAT WORLD™ (May/June '83 Vol.11 No.2), for information on the ages of pedigree cats. Breeders were requested to send details of breed, sex and age of cats in their possession as of May and June 1983. It is gratifying to report that a large number of breeders tendered information, the overwhelming majority from the USA with a few from Australia.

Details were submitted for 577 cats of many breeds, of which 226 were males and 351 were females. Equality of the sexes is not to be anticipated since breeders would retain more females than males for breeding. However, the proportion of males would appear to be higher than expected. In only three replies were cats listed as roaming free and in one of these the roaming was qualified as 'only under supervision'. In view of this the sample was taken to represent cats under confinement. This finding is not unexpected since pedigree cats are too valuable to be allowed unlicensed freedom.

Almost all of the popular breeds in the USA were represented in the sample but in too few numbers for these to be given sensible separate consideration. The long hairs or Persians were in the majority, followed closely by the Siamese. After these, the numbers of other breeds, such as Abyssinians, American Shorthair, Burmese, Himalayan, Korat, Maine Coon, Rex, fell rapidly. All of these are grouped under 'other breeds' in table 1. Too much division into separate breeds would result in the sub-samples being numerically too small for the conclusions to have any meaning.

Average longevity in years for main categories of cats.

Siamese .....	7.87
Persian .....	7.85
Other breeds .....	8.04
Males .....	7.87
Females .....	8.02
Total .....	7.96

The average longevity in years for various categories of the cats is shown by Table 1. The average for the whole sample is 7.96 years (8 years in round figures, say). None of the categories can be said to differ significantly from the overall average; not even between the Siamese and Persians, two breed groups which surely have been maintained as distinct breeding populations for many decades. Even so, no significant differences in longevity are apparent.

With certain exceptions (e.g. Abyssinians), the other breeds could be regarded as somewhat less homogeneous and to exhibit a little hybrid vigour. Their average longevity is certainly greater (8.04) but by so small a margin that little can be made of it. It may be concluded that breed designation, as such, has little or no influence on longevity.

Crude life table for pedigree cats per 1000 individuals

Age	Surviving	Age	Surviving
1	994	11	321
2	906	12	272
3	826	13	226
4	752	14	172
5	683	15	137
6	611	16	88
7	539	17	52
8	479	18	28
9	428	19	10

The average age of females (8.02 years) was slightly greater than for males (7.87 years). However, the difference is so small that it is not possible to assert that females live longer than males. On the other hand, a similar difference in favour of females was noted for the domestics (4.94 versus 5.26 years, respectively). The difference of 0.32 years was non-significant. Nonetheless, the difference, insignificant as it is, should perhaps be noted.

It is interesting that the average longevity for the pedigree cats (8 years) was greater than that for ordinary domestic cats (5 years) by 3 years. This difference is not unsurprising for a variety of reasons. It is to be expected that pedigree cats would receive better nutritional and general care, and to receive more intensive veterinary attention. This is not to imply that domestic cat owners deliberately neglect their charges but that their expertise is generally less than that of pedigree cat breeders.

The fact that the pedigree cats are confined, rather than being allowed to roam free, is probably the major factor in prolonging their lives. Obviously, it sharply reduces the risk of fatal physical accidents. It may also reduce the risk of contacting a virulent disease, although keeping too many cats in close confinement has its own health hazards.

(from center above) in Fig.2 by the bars being much the same width for each age group. Had there been many deaths, the width of the bars would contract rapidly.

In spite of the greater average longevity for the two populations, there appears to be little difference in the potential lifespan. For the domestics, the typical lifespan appeared to be about 18 years. A similar lifespan is apparent for the pedigree cats as shown by the abrupt fall in the percentage of cats alive after this age. In fact, only 4 cats were reported over 20 years of age: two Siamese at

The most vivid illustration of the differences of longevity between pedigree and domestic cats can be seen by comparing Fig. 1 (left) and Fig. 2 (right). The bars of the diagrams indicate the percentage of cats alive according to age and sex for the two populations. Note how the width of the bars decreases quickly according to age for the domestics (Fig. 1) but very gradually for the pedigree cats (Fig. 2). The implication is that of greater mortality among the former than for the latter. In contrast to the domestics, a much higher proportion of pedigree cats is surviving to a ripe old age. This is reflected

The survey has been an exciting exercise in feline demography and has yielded interesting information. May I take this opportunity to convey my appreciation and best thanks to all those breeders who kindly responded to the appeal.

The Cat Fanciers' Association, Inc.

Taken from the abridged edition of the CFA Quarterly published by The Cat Fanciers Association, Inc. to report to CFA member clubs and fanciers the highlights and pertinent information compiled from the October, 1983 meeting of the CFA Executive Board. The regular edition of the CFA Quarterly containing the official and more complete text of the minutes from the meeting is scheduled for distribution in December. Additional copies of the abridged Quarterly are available by request from CFA, Inc., 1309 Allaire Avenue, Ocean NJ 07712.

Highlights of Executive Board Meeting October 22-23, 1983 Chicago, Illinois

Ordinary income was reported up 7.6% over last year. Expenses are also up (10%), but at this time less than projected. The Auditor's report showed net income for 1983 to be $86,000 rather than $106,000 as reported at the Annual Meeting. The change, due to year end adjustments, will alter this year's income figure.

Two new clubs were accepted into membership and a third will become a member upon receipt of an acceptable constitution and by-laws. Resignations were received from two clubs leaving the club membership total at 531.

The Central Office reported a record amount of mail received on a single day. 675 entries were recorded for Monday, October 17, 1983. In addition to other services, applications were filed for 357 litters, 466 cats, 110 transfers of ownership and 51 confirmations.

Approval was given for the continuation of the development of the genetic screening of registrations. Current plans call for additional testing before the computer software changes are implemented. Initially, the breeders and/or owners of questionable cats will be asked to confirm the accuracy of applications.

The Board directed that the following question appear on all Breed Council questionnaires: "Should CFA require 5 generation pedigrees to register cats from foreign and other domestic associations?" The current rules require 3 generations. Also, CFA will initiate a program to identify foreign/other domestic association cats as they appear on registrations and pedigrees.

Another question to appear on their respective ballots will ask Breed Council members their opinions regarding the amalgamation of certain breeds. They are: Persian and Himalayan; Burmese and Malayan; Colorpoint Shorthair and Oriental Shorthair; American Shorthair and American Wirehair.

Other Board action relative to breeds was to change the specialties in which certain breeds compete. Effective May 1, 1984, the Balinese and Somali breeds will compete with the shorthair breeds and be judged by Shorthair Specialty judges. The Javanese, a miscellaneous category breed, will be handled by Shorthair judges. The Exotic Shorthair will be judged with the long-hair breeds and by Longhair Specialty judges.

SHOW RULE CHANGES

In addition to other changes, all to become effective May 1, 1984, the Board passed the following:

- Cats competing in Hawaii will earn the 'Grand' title by earning points based on champions/premiers defeated. The 'Grand Ribbon' system will be discontinued but ribbons achieved prior to that date will be converted to points.
- Licensed Master Clerks when performing the duties of Master Clerk will receive .05¢ per catalog entry per ring. Licensed Certified Clerks will receive .04¢ per catalog entry per ring when performing this duty.
- The Show Entry Clerk must provide a note of explanation with any entry being returned to an exhibitor. This includes entries received after the closing date or after entry limits have been reached.
- In all LH & SH Specialty shows when 35 or more kittens are entered, finals awards must be made for the Top Ten Kittens.
- Judging fees have been increased as follows: Approved Judges 75¢; Approval Pending Judges 50¢; Apprentice Judges 25¢. All fees are per scheduled paid entry.
- In addition to submitting reports on the work and conduct of officiating judges, clubs will be required to also report other information on the conduct of the show, including a financial report on such form as the CFA Board may prescribe.

(Please refer to the Minutes which will be reported in the Winter 1983 Quarterly for additional rule changes and discussion on the preceding items. Also, the 1984 Show Rules will identify rules which have been changed.)

Other Board action gave the go ahead to the Publications Committee to proceed with the establishment of a monthly periodical. A new standing committee was established to be known as The Committee on Animal Welfare,

SHOW ENTRY LIMIT CLARIFICATION

Since May 1, 1983, Show Rule #14.13 entitled "Number of Entries Permissible" has read in part "For one day shows or where the judge will not have the ring or the cats available for more than one day, no club shall accept more than 225 entries." The CFA Executive Board has ruled that the 225 limit will apply to:

1. a one day show;
each day of a two day show which schedules all cats one specialty for judging on one day;
3. each day of a two day show which schedules no judge to officiate for more than one day.

Should you have a question regarding the entry limit for your show, please call the Central Office for additional information.

MATCHING FUNDS PROGRAM EXTENDED

The Executive Board of the Cat Fanciers' Association, Inc. gave its approval at the October meeting to an increase in the amount of funds available to the Matching Fund Program being conducted in conjunction with the Robert Winn Foundation. CFA's contribution may now go as high as $20,000, an increase of $10,000 over the previous ceiling.

The program, which began May 1, 1983, is scheduled to continue until April 30, 1984 or until all CFA funds have been used, whichever comes first. Clubs and individuals donating to the Winn Foundation during this period will have their contribution matched by CFA up to a limit of $250. per donor. To date, over 100 clubs and individual donors have participated in the program, making an additional $9,500 available to fund feline health research.

1984 CALENDARS HERE! VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

The first shipment of 1984 Winn Foundation/Kal Kan calendars arrived at the Central Office and are available for distribution. Needed now are clubs and exhibitors willing to accept the responsibility of selling the calendars at shows and other functions scheduled for November, December and January.

If you'd like to do something to help, this is an excellent opportunity and one which requires little time and effort. The calendars, which sell for $2. in the U.S., $3. foreign, (see order coupon on back cover, Editor's note.), are readily accepted as a genuine bargain by exhibitors and spectators alike.

Kal Kan Foods has, for the third consecutive year, underwritten the entire production cost of the calendar and CFA, Inc. absorbs all distribution expense. This results in 100% of the selling price going to fund feline health research.

If you have some time to spare at the shows you attend and would like to participate in this program, please contact Tom Dent or Allene Sergi at the CFA Central Office, 201 531-2390, or Joan Wastlhuber, 704 648-0060. Your assistance is needed to help us help your cat.

— SELECTIVE BREEDING — FELINE REPRODUCTION

Report by Peter Greuel

Over one hundred veterinarians, cat breeders and cat fanciers gathered in Arlington, Texas on October 22nd 1983 to attend the CAT OWNERS AND BREEDERS SEMINAR. This was a day long event, addressing the latest developments in feline veterinary medicine.

Great thanks and credit need be given the organizers and sponsors: Office of Continuing Education of Texas A&M University, Dallas and Tarrant County Veterinary Medical Associations, and Kal-Kan Pet Foods. The latter picked up fully one half of the tuition costs.

The day was a full one, the latest research ideas being presented by authorities in their respective fields. What follows is a summary of highlights taken from my notes, and is aimed towards the interests of breeders and exhibitors.

“THE FELINE LEUKEMIA COMPLEX”

Dr. Claudia L. Barton, D.V.M., diplomate, American College of Veterinary Internal Medicine; Associate Professor Small Animal Medicine and Surgery, Texas A&M University, specializing in oncology, started the day by addressing “The Feline Leukemia Complex”.

Let's start with a bit of good news in this very “bad news” subject. Initial transmission of the Feline Leukemia Virus (FeLV) is primarily through saliva (licking and cleaning) and plasma and, to a lesser degree via feces and urine (common litter pans and sleeping areas). FeLV is not transmitted via the respiratory system or in an airborne manner. Furthermore, it is not a very contagious disease, requiring repeated exposures to large numbers of viral particles to cause initial viremia. Thus, current precautions taken at cat shows, plus a bit of common sense on the part of exhibitors, make transmission of FeLV at cat shows unlikely.

But this mode of infection also raises serious questions for the “cats-under-foot” type breeder. Mutual licking and cleaning, as well as common litter and food pans, provide prime opportunities for FeLV transmission. Thus the “under foot” breeders need weigh the potential cost of mass infections — and euthanasia. The caged cattery clearly has the advantage in this respect.

Let us now turn to the typical course of this disease as it invades and permeates the victim's body. This brief summary will explain why the FeLV is transmitted primarily through plasma and saliva products and how the ELISA and IFA (Hardy) tests for FeLV differ.

The FeLV invades the cat's body through nose/mouth exposure. Usually within two to ten weeks the virus has migrated to the lymph nodes of the neck, where it invades the cells, takes over their metabolic machinery and commands them to make more FeLV. This localized initial viremia of the neck lymph nodes results in non-specific, vague symptoms: lack of appetite, loss of weight, depression and listlessness, and a persistent fever of 103-105° which does not respond to antibiotic therapy. One study indicates that 10% of the cats will die and 32% will become persistently infected at this stage. Another study indicates 19% will die, 26% will completely recover, and 55% will become persistently infected.

This initial viremia is localized to the lymph nodes of the neck. However, as cells are invaded by and taken over by the FeLV, viral “buds” are formed on the exterior walls of the infected cells, and these “buds” are shed into the bloodstream. Thus FeLV spreads to the spleen and lymph nodes throughout the body and continues on to infect all epithelial surfaces in the mouth, bladder and so on. At this point the animal has a generalized FeLV infection and, with infection of the mouth and bladder epithelial cells, it becomes infectious to other cats. Thus saliva and blood serum products such as semen are the primary vehicles of transmission.

The final stages of the infection begin with invasion of the bone marrow. Marrow consists of cells which are shed into the bloodstream as white blood cells, red cells, and so on. These marrow cells are reprogrammed by the virus to make more FeLV, and not new marrow cells. Infected cells enter the bloodstream and spread the infection throughout the body. In the final stages the marrow cells cannot reproduce themselves and bones normally filled with marrow will be empty. The cat will exhibit extreme anemia.

This brief recap of the disease's development allows us to see how the Hardy (immunofluorescent antibody) and ELISA tests for FeLV work, how they differ in what they test, and what significance this has for the breeder. The ELISA test indicates the presence of the FeLV itself in very small quantities, and at the earliest of stages. The Hardy (IFA) test tests for FOCMA antibodies, not for the presence of the virus itself. The Hardy positive result means only that the body is engaging its immune defenses against FeLV infected tumor cells.

With the initial viremia, localized in the lymph nodes of the neck, a cat may test Hardy negative and ELISA positive because the FeLV is present and active but the body has not yet mounted a generalized antibody defensive response. Conversely, in the bone marrow example given above, the cat will test Hardy positive during the "proliferative" stage in which FeLV infected tumor cells are being shed into the bloodstream, but will test Hardy negative at the final "degenerative" stages in which the marrow and, therefore even the cancerous cells themselves have been eliminated by the disease. Other manifestations of FeLV generally have "proliferative" (tumor spreading) and "degenerative" (devastated aftermath) clinical forms, and Hardy will test positive only in the proliferative forms since it tests only for the presence of antibodies which are formed only in response to tumors. ELISA positive results will be obtained in all instances since it tests for the presence of the virus itself. Thus, one lives in a fools' world if one feels that a Hardy negative result is always a clean bill of health. This is of particular importance when offering or receiving the services of a stud cat — at this point a Hardy negative result could well be obtained while ELISA positive would reveal early stages of the disease. Another case, to be addressed shortly, is that in which a cat persistently tests ELISA positive, IFA negative, and develops no clinical symptoms. Researchers simply don't know if this type of individual is contagious. Depending upon the value of your breeding stock, an ELISA test will reveal this possible danger and allow you to make your own judgment.

THE "CARRIER"

What about the FeLV "carrier" we have heard about for years? The sad fact is that in overwhelming numbers the carrier has an impaired immune system making it a sitting duck for non-FeLV diseases (bacterial, fungal, and cancer). Furthermore, the impaired immune system makes treatment of any resulting cancerous tumors fruitless. 50% of carriers will die within two years and 80% will die within three years of the initial infection. Of the remaining 20%, nearly two-thirds will remain chronically ill, facing crisis after crisis.

That leaves a very small number of individuals who test ELISA positive, IFA negative, remain apparently healthy, and from whose bodies researchers cannot culture the FeLV. These seem unable to rid their bodies of FeLV, although we do not know where they harbor it. Researchers simply do not know if these individuals are contagious.

Treatment of feline leukemia caused cancers is generally not recommended if the cat continues to test

FeLV positive since its immune system is impaired by the virus and therapy is generally fruitless. However, if the cat has thrown off the virus and therefore tests FeLV negative, its immune system may well be normal and treatment of many resulting forms of tumors has more favorable prognosis.

FeLV VACCINE

Now for the long awaited FeLV vaccine. The Ohio State University vaccine was developed about four years ago, and Norden Laboratories, Inc. purchased manufacturing rights to it.

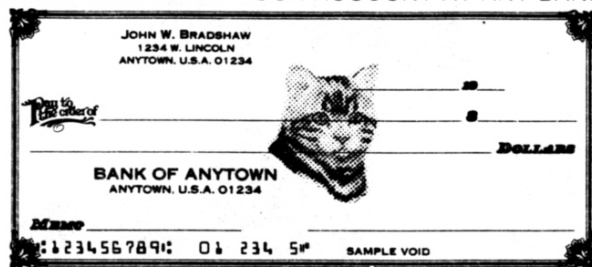

The vaccine is not generally available. That is because we seem generally to lack the required technology at this point to mass produce the vaccine. The problem with producing any FeLV vaccine is that the virus, either killed or attenuated, must be present in the vaccine in order to trigger the body's immune response. A part of the feleuk virus does exactly that; the problem is that another part of the same virus destroys the body's immune system. The OSU vaccine was successful because at one — and only one — very specific point in the growth of the feleuk virus in the cell the virus sheds immune triggering portions of itself without also shedding the immune destroying parts. Any small error in the process and one is innoculating a cat with a substance which will destroy its immune system. Apparently, no method of mass production has been able to provide adequate control to assure a safe vaccine. Possibly we will need to await technological developments in genetic engineering which will allow us to grow a feline leukemia virus which contains only the immune triggering portion of the virus.

Lastly the subject of 'ImmunoRegulin' was raised by a participant. This is a new drug that has been getting some widespread publicity but, with closer examination, raises some real questions. First, the drug does produce some immuno-stimulation of a non-specific sort in the cat. There have been some anecdotal instances claiming remissions of lymphosarcoma, a cancer caused by the FeLV. However, this drug has not been submitted to the Food & Drug Administration and there has been no controlled testing of this drug to prove effectiveness. The manufacturer of this drug has not been required to submit to federal requirements since it is not sold interstate. Any purchase of it within the state of Texas, for example, is a purchase of 'ImmunoRegulin' which has been manufactured in Texas.

FUS & FIP

Dr. Alice M. Wolf, D.V.M., diplomate, American College of Veterinary Internal Medicine, assistant professor, Small Animal Medicine and Surgery, Texas A&M University followed with a discussion of FUS (Feline Urologic Syndrome) and FIP (Feline Infectious Peritonitis).

The cause of FUS is still unknown. Theories implicate viral infections, diet, mineral in the diet, or cats who simply don't urinate frequently enough. No single theory seems fully to explain FUS. It is true that massive levels of magnesium in the diet can cause FUS, but normal levels have not. No particular brand of wet or dry cat food was recommended by Dr. Wolf for the cat not suffering from FUS. Similarly, she did not recommend routine use of acidifiers because cats' urine is usually acid in the first place and, to be effective, an acidifier must be given five to six times daily.

Dr. Wolf then turned to FIP — recent research having radically changed our understanding of this disease. When a test for FIP was first available, a "test and slaughter" approach was used. Then it was discovered that most cats had FIP titers and it was believed to be a disease with high morbidity but low mortality. The current view is that FIP has low morbidity and high mortality, that is to say, few domestic cats contract FIP but when they do FIP is uniformly fatal.

Here is a bit of background on the disease's course. Incubation of the disease can be as long as four months. Transmission is by secretions, excretions, and by respiratory means. Doctors are not positive of the exact means of transmission because they have not been able to infect cats in a laboratory setting in a manner which would resemble the natural environment. But they feel transmission requires close contact, and the virus is not very highly contagious. The virus also dies within two to three hours on environmental surfaces (possibly longer persistence around litter boxes), and a standard thirty-to-one chlorine bleach solution is an effective disinfectant.

Clinically, FIP is characterized by chronic fever, weight loss, dehydration, mild anemia (except in cases which also test FeLV positive), jaundice, vomiting and diarrhea, and accumulation of fluids in the abdominal and chest cavities in the "wet" or "classic" form of the disease. The disease is one which strikes the young cat — 87% of all confirmed FIP cases are in cats less than three years old. Another peak occurs in cats older than ten years. Like FeLV, the FIP virus suppresses the immune system. Thus, 50% of all cats who have FIP also test FeLV positive. Whichever virus strikes first lowers the cat's ability to fight off a subsequent encounter with the other virus. Researchers still believe that FIP is associated with spontaneous abortions, miscarriages and fading kitten syndrome.

FIP is not uncomplicated, however. The clinical symptoms can resemble many different diseases — especially the "dry" forms in which fluids do not accumulate in the abdomen. The FIP titer test indicates immune system reaction to a coronavirus, one of which is the FIP virus. The trouble is that it cannot differentiate between the FIP coronavirus and the rather mild, self-limiting enteric coronavirus. Thus a titer of 1 - 1600 plus, accompanied by clinical symptoms, is probably FIP. If a titer doubles or triples in two to three weeks after the initial test, Dr. Wolf is confident that the case is FIP. She emphasizes, however, never euthanize a cat solely on the presence of a coronavirus titer.

Research has shown that prior exposure to the enteric coronavirus, and presence of antibodies to that virus, actually shortens the subsequent FIP incubation period, makes the course of the disease proceed more rapidly, and usually the FIP is of the dry form. Thus, it appears that antibodies to the coronavirus only make subsequent reactions to the FIP virus worse. That is the case because reaction between the FIP virus and the antibodies causes destruction of the cat's cells, and may precipitate out, affecting various organs. Therefore, treatment of FIP includes administration of steroids and immunosuppressant drugs to reduce antibody production. Extending this, it is therefore impossible ever to perfect an effective vaccine against FIP since antibodies stimulated by a vaccine would only make the infection worse.

It is not known if FIP carriers exist, i.e. cats who are infectious to others but show no clinical signs themselves. Those cats who show fluctuating titers probably are not infected with FIP, but rather are reacting to enteric coronavirus exposure.

The Ohio State University drug, developed by Dr. Richard G. Olsen (CWJan/Feb., Mar/Apr. & May/June '83) has been used at the Texas A&M clinic, and all subjects have died. It is not clear if these negative results are caused by ineffectiveness of the drug or by the fact that the cats were too seriously ill for the drug to be effective.

Some members of the audience were skeptical about some elements of the above discussion. The "classical" or "wet" form of FIP can be verified through examination of the fluid which accumulates in the abdomen. However, the more difficult to diagnose "dry" form of the disease may have many different forms, resembling other diseases. Without a test to uniquely identify the FIP coronavirus, how can one assert that FIP is "uniformly fatal"? Is one caught in the tautology of asserting that a cat with a high and rising titer that dies indeed had FIP, while another that lives did not? Could the cat owner save his money by not even running a titer and simply providing supportive measures? What does a low titer, such as 1 - 100 or 1 - 400, really mean even if the test results rise from the former to the latter within a couple of weeks? Typically a titer less than 1 - 1600 plus would indicate "wet" FIP. What about the case reported in the last issue of CW (Sept/Oct. '83) in which the cat exhibited "dry" FIP symptoms, and had a titer of only 1 - 400? Researchers now know that two coronaviruses exist and the FIP test cannot differentiate between them. How do we know that only two exist and not more? . . . And that some of these others may cause serious but not necessarily fatal disease? Indeed, many felt the last word on FIP has not yet been uttered.

GENETIC CONSIDERATIONS — SELECTIVE BREEDING

Dr. Joe W. Templeton, PhD., associate professor, Veterinary Pathology, Texas A&M University, addressed us on the subject of "Genetic Considerations for the Cat Breeder". Most time was spent on a quick review of basic genetics. However, he gave a few suggestions for a successful breeding program: (1) Make a written list of two or three breeding objectives in order of importance to you. (2) Keep extensive written records on all individuals, and quantify as much as possible. For example, if a certain head configuration is a breeding goal one may wish to photograph all individuals' heads against a standard grid. These written and quantified records are necessary simply because one cannot rely on memory, which is selective and inaccurate.

A breeding program is simply selective breeding — line breeding or inbreeding. Selective breeding simply shifts the mean traits of the offspring. That is to say, in any group one expects to find variation, say in tail length:

Now, say we selective breed for a long tail by mating X and Y. We do not expect a graph plotting the lengths of the offsprings' tails to look like this.

No, the graph will look just like the first one! — but with one big difference. The dotted line showing the mean length of the offsprings' tails will move to the right — the "average" tail is longer, although we still will be getting some very short tails.

A selective breeding program simply accelerates this change and guides the course of this change. However, the more traits you wish to select for in your breeding goals, the more will offspring reflect no selective breeding. Goals cancel each other out. On the other hand, the fewer goals one selects for, the more rapid will be the rate and extent of change. And that's just common sense — everyone knows it is much easier to breed a cat with a longer tail than it is to breed, for example, the absolutely perfect Aby.

NO MATING TOO CLOSE

There is no mating that is "too close". Breeding full siblings will, at least, quickly reveal any problems, and may well reveal some grand highlights. In fact, some studies indicate that line and inbreeding within similar groups will result in an equal degree of inbreeding once the breeding goals are achieved in both groups. The value and costs of inbreeding and outcrossing can only be determined within the framework of your particular breeding goals.

FELINE REPRODUCTION

The day long meeting ended with Dr. Stephen W. J. Seager, D.V.M., PhD., associate professor, Veterinary Physiology and Pharmacology, Texas A&M University, addressing "Feline Reproduction". His presentation was anecdotal, illustrated with colorful, fascinating slides. Dr. Seager pioneered work in artificial insemination of the cat, induced ovulation, and freezing of semen samples. I hear that his development and use of electrostimulation to induce erection and ejaculation has been denounced as cruel and undignified. That is rather hard to understand in that the technique causes no tissue damage, is used on anesthetized animals (how else would you approach a tiger or leopard and persuade him to allow application of the electrode?), and involves no more than three to four volts of electricity (about as much as holding two "D" size flashlight batteries together in your wet hand). And Dr. Seager's work has resulted in some real benefits. For example, it is possible to collect semen samples from wild populations and inseminate overly inbred, non-vigorous zoo populations, thus providing a vital injection of new genes into that gene pool. In research, certain genetic defects may kill an animal before it can reproduce extensively and thereby provide specimens for study. By collecting semen samples researchers can reproduce many such animals with that genetic defect, and thereby further science.

With Dr. Seager's presentation, the seminar ended and all sought cures of "situs". We were all excited by new ideas and knowledge, and hoped that this seminar would prove to be the first in a continuing series.

VOX POPULI—VOX PUSSYCAT

..... COME ON, SHOW COMMITTEE, GIVE US 'EQUAL RIGHTS'!

For obvious reasons, I am claiming the anonymity offered under your editorial policy. Just recently, a friend gave me the precise count on longhair and shorthair entries for champ., kitten and premiership classes at a major show which was to take place the following week-end. I am not one of the "high rollers". I go to local shows (by local I mean within about 100 miles of my home) and I depend on these shows to give my cats an opportunity to make their championship and grand points. The campaigners can double and even quadruple enter their cats, knowing they will be able to find out where the most advantageous competition will take place and they go to that show. UNFAIR! If show committee people pander to them by giving out the entry statistics, then, by the same token, I should be given the choice to withdraw my cats from what will undoubtedly be top heavy competition at a show favored by the few who have the means to schlep their cats from coast to coast and points in between, following their favored judges for a sure win and depriving the small exhibitor, like me, of the chance of a fair judging. . . / know I have good cats. If the campaign cats are present, will the judges even look at them? You can't convince me the judges don't recognize the cats they see week-end after week-end or that they aren't well aware they have one of the serious contenders for year end awards on their table! Isn't there a rule that prohibits the giving out of information like that before a show.

"WE ARE CATS TOO WITHOUT PAPERS"

Dr. Darwin Norby (THEARIES; Sept/Oct. '83) should be ashamed of himself. Breeding kittens with birth defects. What is he trying to prove? He has proved that some male calicos can be fertile — leave well enough alone. There is enough sadness and cruelty in the animal world without more added. Shame on him.

What's the matter with CFA — Are they ashamed of HHP's. (The Forum, Sept/Oct.'83). Can't they acknowledge regional winners. I have written many times to CFA. They never bother to answer. Other assoc. (TICA, etc.) acknowledge us. I think HHP's are an important part of each show.

We have no breeding problems, no problems of kittens to dispose of, no spraying caged males, just a lot of love to give to our little dears.

We are cats too without papers.

CAT SHOWS SHOULD BE FOR CATS. . .

I wanted to write and thank you for the stunning job done on the Sprite cover (Sept/Oct.'83). The composition is beautiful and finally people will be able to see what a beautiful boy this is. Am sending you a couple of photos from the banquet — Sprite is so funny. He loves all the cheering and is a total ham. One judge said: "This cat has something I have never seen before — complete inner conceit"

— a bit true.

SGC Typha Nite Sprite,
TICA '83 BEST CAT,

Larry Paul

I don't know if I told you but my HHP, Overpass, went Best Kitten HHPCC — Overpass was thrown from a car on an overpass — Hip shattered — He is another ham — He and Sprite will be used for a fund raising for animal welfare, as they both enjoy people.

I liked Jeanclaire Bridgers' 'Murphy's Cats' (Sept/Oct.'83) — Funny lady — Nice to read something amusing and not totally ex/breeder oriented. I happen to like cats — I wish to God some of these people would shut up and do more for animals. . . .

So many of us want medical knowledge and I am tired of so-called 'genetics' that are used to feed egos. When you lose a cat and can't find out why it really does not matter what color the poor thing was — I feel the genetics should be left to the pros — Cat Shows should be for CATS! When Sprite was a kit I asked Bill Lee what we were doing in the stupid show hall battling for a rosette. Bill said: "Salli, when you work so hard, you really like praise now and then". That is true. Being a breeder is a rough job. Then God makes a Sprite and you get to go cry watching your baby. When Sprite retired his "competition" gave him a standing ovation. That was about the nicest gesture I have ever seen. (I cried some more).

KLINFELTER'S SYNDROME NOT THE ONLY CAUSE OF MALE TORTIES

I think Thea de Vos (Theories, Sept/Oct. '83) is on slightly dangerous ground over the male torties. Klinefelter's syndrome is not the only cause of male torties. Susan Long at Bristol Vet. School has been doing a lot of work on these cats and has found many different chromosome configurations which cause this. For instance — CH (G.C.C.F.) Marilane Harlequin is a male Tortie Point Siamese who not only sires healthy kittens, but show quality kittens, and with great enthusiasm. Although he looks a very definite tortie, with a blaze, broken colour on his points and even a scrotum which is half red, half seal, he breeds like a Seal Point. He has a combination of two different XY cells, one set with the orange gene, one set without, thus making him a tortie on the outside; however, his gonadal cells would appear to be purely made up of XY lacking the orange gene, thus making him breed as a Seal. There is no sign of XXY cells, so he has no more likelihood of siring abnormal kittens than any other normal male. In addition, a friend of mine bred a Red "Self" Oriental male, sired by my Champion Cream Point Siamese out of her Oriental Tortie queen: this red male had one tortie foot but bred consistently as a red. We did not bother to investigate his chromosomes as he was only used at stud for a very short while, but he presumably possessed a few XY cells which lacked the orange gene, these being confined to one foot.

Thea seems to be working on the assumption that all tortie males have Klinefelter's syndrome hence the caution she recommends. However, these mosaic cats do not appear to run in families, the two cited above being related only very far back in their pedigrees, and there is no suggestion that the abnormality can be passed on. In order to discover how a male can be a tortie it is necessary to study the chromosomes in each individual. Thea also fails to mention that Klinefelter's syndrome need not be expressed as a tortie. There is no reason why one of the X chromosomes should carry orange, so many XXY cats could be black, blue etc. Mosaics may also be seen in other colours than tortie; I have seen a black and white non-pedigree who had a large chocolate patch which was not due to injury. This cat had normal XY configuration.

I love Jeanclaire's 'Murphy's Law' — too true!

TICA GENETIC REG. NOT CLEARLY STATED

In reading Mrs. Vicki Markstein's article (Mar/Apr. '83 #61) on the "AOV" Orientals and the letters in response to it I find the TICA genetic registration referred to but not clearly stated.

It is the aim of TICA to promote accurate, genetically sound pedigrees. We believe the principle of "Register the cat as what it is and show it as what it looks like" will encourage breeders to provide such pedigrees.

The provisions permitting intermating between the Siamese and Orientals (or Persians and Himalayans) is not new to the cat fancy as it merely restates the legitimates long-standing breeding practices that are recognized in many associations. The variant cats from these intermatings and the inevitable variants which will show up without any further intermating will continue to be registered as Orientals (or Himalayans). Handled this way it will not "pollute" any pedigrees or any breed.

The new and different provision in our system is that those variant cats will be permitted to be shown in the classes with the cats they look like. This will remove the incentive and the temptation for a breeder to register the variants falsely as the breed they resemble. And please let's face the fact that there are pedigrees out there that show Oriental variants as Siamese and Himalayans as Persians. Since we are dealing with recessive genes that can be carried for many generations there are people who already have or will be getting some surprising cats from their breeding programs because of these inaccurate pedigrees.

CATS UNDER ATTACK WEST — & EAST — AGAIN

In the August '83 issue of the ACA Newsletter, editor Elson E. Irwin, Box 20803, San Diego CA 92120, reports on ACA's Humane Committee Chp. Irene Gizzi's presentation to the Los Angeles Board of Animal Regulation Commissioners of ACA's stand in the matter of cat licensing, under consideration by the L.A. authority, which was to drop it in view of the dangers of cats being tagged and forced to wear licences. ACA requests that cat owners who react strongly to this should let the L.A. Animal Board know how they feel. What happens in L.A. COULD BECOME A MODEL FOR OTHER CITIES! Written comments should be sent to: The Board of Animal Regulation Commissioners, Room 1650, City Hall East, 200 N.Main St., Los Angeles CA 90012.

... AND JUST WHOSE FRIENDS ARE THEY

"FRIENDS OF ANIMALS HAS DRAFTED MODEL ORDINANCE

NEW JERSEY — Abandoned cats and irresponsible breeding by pet owners has become a statewide problem of near-crisis proportions, a Neptune based animal protection group says. The group, Friends of Animals, Inc., has come up with an innovative solution to this growing vexation for the communities affected by the homeless felines.

Susan Russell, education director for the non-profit society, said the organization's lawyers recently drafted a model ordinance for towns "to promote human responsibility" for domestic cats. She deplored past short-term solutions which involve traps, rifles, and tranquilizer guns.

Specifically, the proposed ordinance, available to all municipalities through Friends of Animals, would require owners of breeding-age cats to obtain a breeder's certificate for $100. each if a cat has not been spayed or neutered. This, said Ms. Russell, would provide an incentive to control cat populations through the spaying of females since the cost of spaying is well below the proposed breeder's fee. "In fact", she said, "under our non-profit spay program which is active statewide in cooperation with New Jersey veterinarians, the pet owners pay from $20. to $30. for the spaying of a female cat, a price which includes inoculations, hospitalization, and other costs."

The model ordinance would require any pet store, pound, shelter, or breeder selling or releasing an unaltered cat to charge the new owner $20., a deposit that would be refunded in the event the cat was neutered. Failure to produce a breeding certificate for an unaltered cat would be an offense punishable by a $500. fine. And a bounty of sorts, $25., would be paid to any person who notifies a municipal clerk of a proven failure to comply with the ordinance, such a failure generally proven by the production of a litter of kittens.

Ms. Russell cited the recent incident in Allenhurst, Monmouth County, where officials paid a private contractor $10. for each of about 250 stray cats captured and killed. "Rather than such short-term, costly and cruel solutions to the problem.....local officials must address the cause of the problem and legislate a form of personal and fiscal responsibility for pet owners that would prevent the suffering of unwanted or temporarily wanted domestic animals." She summarized the proposed ordinance by saying that "Breeding control for pets is an acknowledged responsibility of pet ownership."

Do you know anything about the "model ordinance" . . . (submitted by Mary Lebrecht). . . from a recent Balinese club newsletter? Apparently this legislation is being promoted throughout New Jersey. Is anyone doing anything to oppose or try to modify it? I tend to agree with Bev Eitner (the newsletter editor) that this ordinance would unduly harm those of us who try to be responsible, rather than really solving the problem of abandoned animals and irresponsible breeding and over-population. But I'm not sure what action to take (I'm busy and spread too thin already) — except to alert the people I know in the area. Any ideas? Please carry on as seems wisest to you—

BARBARA HARR,
418 Westfield Avenue, Westfield NJ 07090.

As the years roll by, this type of "legislation" is proposed again and again. It ultimately hurts only the responsible, bona fide breeder, whose cats are carefully and infrequently bred, are not let loose to run the streets and spray on parked cars or dig in other folks' gardens, are sold with neuter/spay agreements and are generally protected to the best of the breeder's ability. The so-called breeders who avoid any kind of conscience pangs or control far outnumber us and are not fingered. Ms. Susan Russell should investigate a more "blanket" attack on this problem such as is being waged by those who don't want anybody to smoke.

Those crusaders, weary of personal battles with individuals, started small but grew and grew, and now those they deem offenders have been placed in the uncomfortable position of being ostracized, with the brunt of general opinion to buck, shouted as it is from signs almost everywhere we look. I suggested this kind of campaign in Felicitude Jan/Feb/'83. Thanks to those who called or wrote for reprints. We know the attempts such as those outlined above have failed — why not try something fresh?

Write for reprint prices — or go ahead and make your own copies — let's get something done! Editor

FIP— THE MOST OVERDIAGNOSED DISEASE

The latest issue (S/O '83) reported on "The successful treatment of a case of FIP". We all know that FIP is the most overdiagnosed disease in cats but the diagnosis of FIP in this particular cat beats anything I have heard before. It seems to me that the cat most likely contracted a bacterial infection while being spayed. The veterinarian probably considered but didn't want to discuss this for him rather embarrassing possibility.

The increase in FIP titer from 1/100 to 1/400 may not be significant and is not diagnostic for FIP. Titers are usually made in two-fold steps. A FIP titer of 1/100 therefore means 1/50, 1/100 or 1/200. A titer of 1/400 may mean 1/200, 1/400, or 1/800. The cat in the story probably had antibody levels corresponding to a titer of 1/200 on both test occasions and this titer only means that the cat had some time in the past been exposed to a coronavirus, not necessarily the FIP virus. Please refer to Dr. Niels Pedersen's articles in Feline Practice, Vol.13, numbers 4 and 5, 1983 for a complete review of current knowledge about FIP.

Eva Engvall, TANGENS Abyssinians,
262 Via Del Cerrito, Olivenhain, CA 92024.

The articles referenced (which I had studied) accompanied the manuscript submitted by Sarah Timewell who had received them from her veterinarian in charge of the case. The latest, sad, news is that Ellie Mae is sick again. Thanks, Eva — these columns are for discussions and your comments are appreciated. Ed.

CWI NZ'S TOP CATS AWARDS ENDED

We feel sure many of our NZ friends will be sad — as we are — to learn that, in response to some claims made down there that our annual awards were "commercial", we have withdrawn this annual event and there will be no more awards, to avoid conflict with the powers-that-be in some clubs who apparently misunderstood our gesture of goodwill toward the lovely Top Cats of New Zealand — the only annual awards offered in that country for so many years, scored by Mr. Hurle Rayner and organized by Mrs. Jill Dawson on a purely voluntary basis. I am sure those who enjoyed seeing NZ's Top Cats in our pages will join me in conveying our thanks to all those who contributed to the success of this effort, especially to Hurle and his wife Rae, and Jill and her long-suffering family who donated countless hours to doing something nice for cats, without personal gain, for the past seven years. We want everyone to know we got a lot of pleasure seeing 'Kiwi cats' in CW — we hope they will still 'visit' in our pages. Editor

Birman breeders will be interested to know that the cat that got the highest number of points in this year's Great Cats of Great Britain awards was the magnificent Birman male neuter — Gr Pr Stratheden Saroki Chio. Sorry we didn't get his photo to show you this glorious cat.

NEWSLETTER FOR CFA MANX BREED COUNCIL

Enclosed find my Breed Council mailing — as promised. I hope to put out 3-4 "Forums" a year, depending on the response I get from the Breed Council members. I chose "The Forum" as the way to go — as I believe all matters pertaining to the Breed Council should be sent to Breed Council members only — that is — CFA people only!

Barbara St. Georges, BRIAR-BRAE Manx,
CFA Manx Breed Cttee. Sec.,

310 Country Lane, Bosque Farms, NM 87068.

Barbara's newsletter provides queries on current 'problems' with the Manx standard as well as a full report, prepared by Marjorie Lomoriello (RED OAKS MILL) on the Manx Br.Cttee. breakfast held on June 24 in Atlanta; and a questionnaire setting out current standard proposals — Now, that's service! Let us echo Barbara's closing lines: "In the meantime, don't forget to vote. Let's have a 100 percent turnout from the 44 Manx Committee members". Editor's Note.

A WORD ABOUT OUR SPONSORS!

Western Plateau Meats are really catching on with the breeders as they find their cats enjoy it as well as benefit from its natural goodness. Ingredients and analysis are listed in their ad (inside front cover). It comes in 25-lb. and 5-lb. quantities as well as the handy 8-oz. patties.

Those lovely bank checks can be ordered with your own cat on them! How nice to have your favorite smiling up at you as you pay for the goodies you buy. (page 44).

Now there is an international club for collectors of all sorts of cat items, with its own bi-monthly newsletter! See BILLBOARDS section for details.

The trend more and more is toward natural products and ORANGE COUNTY PET CENTER carries a huge inventory, including LIGHTNING products (page 45).

A new natural food that is causing much interest and eagerness to buy is CORNUCOPIA. Elaine Smith encountered this at a N.W. show recently and is now conducting a test with her Nantascot Orientals. We have contacted the manufacturers and hope to have more to tell you about this soon. Meantime, contact "Dr. Natural" — Jeff Broderick, DVM, International Healthline ph: 516/427-7479; New York City Healthline: 212/895-5175, or write to: Veterinary Nutritional Associates, Ltd., 229 Wall St., Huntington, NY 11743, and find out who is the Distributor in your state.

The Cat Fancier's Data Center is a computerized REFERRAL service — NOT a registry — catering to fanciers in ALL associations (page 28).

ELLEN CROCKETT WRITES FROM GERMANY —

Enclosed is a list of the winners in the Mr. & Mrs. Germany contest for 1982-'83. Photos will be published in 'die edelkatze' (Chief Editor: Hans-R. Niehoff, Friedrichstrasse 48, 6200 Wiesbaden, W. Germany).

We are very proud that our cat, GR Int.CH Vicrock Lola, was 13th best cat — quite an achievement, akin to making the top 20 in CFA. (The best foreign owned cat was a female "Mrs." — Repaille del Marimar, Blue Persian owned by Ch. Yvens, B-4800 Verviers, Belgium, with 1120 pts., and the best German cat was "Mr.", Danny vom Rhener Moor, Sealpt.Birman, owned by Maritta Sielaff, 2359 Henstedt-Ulz. 3, Germany, with 2050 pts.

At the Awards dinner in Wiesbaden, each of the owners of the winning cats was presented with a plaque of the Wiesbaden Kurhaus (spa) done in pewter — a truly lovely reminder engraved with the cat's name and award. The banquet itself was a gala event with a multi-course dinner with entertainment between courses. The acts were varied, an opera singer, a magic act performed by Mr. J. P. Rossi, president of the Belgian FIFe group and FIFe allbreed judge, a song and dance presentation by the Wiesbaden theater & dance group, including the first German performance of numbers from "Cats". Of course, the highlight was the awards presentation featuring a slide show of the cats themselves.

The banquet was fairly formal — many men wore "smoking" (dinner jackets) and the ladies wore cocktail or evening dress. There were a few jacketless men to start — many more by the end of the evening as the temperature rose! Unfortunately, the banquet room became stifling hot as a result of our hot summer here, so soon dinner jackets and ties were removed and everyone found his own way to keep cool — the management provided ice for drinks — a thing virtually unknown here in Germany. Everyone enjoyed the evening in spite of the heat. Air conditioning is also rare here in Germany, as it is not usually needed.

This is the first time for these awards, and for the coming year the scoring has been changed somewhat but it was certainly a great beginning.

Grand International Ch Vicrock Lola, black Devon Rex f. — 13th Best Adult Cat, 'Mr. & Mrs. Germany, 1982-'83.

We will be returning to the U.S. in December and will look back on our 3 years here with wonderful memories. My cats will fly back on the plane with me — should be no problem — wasn't coming over. U.S. cats are allowed to be shown here any time based on CFA regs. There is no quarantine coming or going, only a health cert., and rabies vac. are necessary.

THE END OF A DYNASTY IN HAWAII

At the November 5th show in Hawaii, it was CFA SW Regional Director and Judge Wayne Park's sad task to announce the death the previous day of the wellknown cat fancy personage, Marcia Dial Hopkins. Marcia succumbed to complications following surgery for cancer of the colon. Marcia's NA ALI'I cattery has produced some of Hawaii's top cats for many years. She will be remembered with affection and respect.

Apparently there is a shortage of shorthairs in Hawaii — of the 130 total entries to the show only 11 were SH!

Wayne Park had a date with The Merv Griffin Show — along with 20 cats — on Nov. 15th, for taping a show to be seen on our TV screens at a later date.
